They expected every moment to see the masts go by the board. After what must have been a very cheerful fortyfive minutes the flames snuffed out suddenly and left darkness so thick that it might have been cut. Another singular occurrence was that of the bark Peter Pridell, which was off Valparaiso when a whirlylnd passed over her stern, taking away everything movable, sails and all, on the after part of the ship, leaving the forward end untouched. Here was the sharp end of a storm with a vengeance. Almost as surprised at their good fortune and narrow escape must have been the crew of the barkentine For tunate, which, while on a voyage from Rio Grande to Liverpool, felt a tremendous shock that could not be accounted for until the vessel was put into dry dock, when the sword of a swordfish was found to have penetrated some fect into the wood of the hall. Yet another of the corlosities of the sea is the pecasional shower of fishbones or the like falling on the deek when many miles from land. These showers are poor, and they will build you a statue. nose, and make a mental comparison three coins turning up alike is two to easily explained. The fish are taken up in watersponts and come down in a more or less rarefied condition. But perhaps the most awful of all things that can happen at sea is a fire. A severe squall breaking over a vessel unprepared for it and with all her sails set is bad, but the experience is short, sharp and generally decisive; but for long-drawn-ont agony there is nothing like a fire, especially if it is among coal and there is also dynamite or gunpowder in the cargo.
